THEY'RE ALL OUT OF STEP

BUT SMITH...

That's according to Smith, of course. Actually it's Smith who's 'way out of step — all the others know the value of reading the B of M Business Review from cover to cover. This concise monthly spotlight on the business scene is invaluable in keeping you abreast of Canadian economic affairs. Make it a point to read it every month. There's a personal copy available for you — even if your name is Smith. Just drop a line today to: Business Development Department, Bank of Montreal, P.O. Box 6002, Montreal 3, P.Q.

INTRODUCTION

THE CANADIAN TRADE INDEX is designed to provide buyers and sellers of Canada and other countries with an authoritative guide to products manufactured in Canada, and the names of the firms making them. It includes a comprehensive list of Canadian manufacturers having more than a local distribution for their products, irrespective of membership in the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Their products are classified under some 10,000 different headings.

This new edition of the INDEX includes details of many new firms and a great variety of new products, some of them being made in Canada for the first time. In addition, it embodies countless thousands of changes of names, addresses, product listings, foreign representatives, etc.

The accurate and detailed classifications in the INDEX will ordinarily enable prospective purchasers to get in touch at once with manufacturers of the goods desired. Where specialized information is needed, buyers are invited to call on the gratuitous service of the Commercial Intelligence Department of the Association. It is suggested that importers abroad should first communicate with the nearest Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, consulting the list of their addresses on pages 258-9 of the Export Section. Representatives of overseas firms visiting Canada are invited to call at the Head Office of the Association where they will be given every possible assistance.

Users of the INDEX will find the regular advertising sections invaluable in supplementing the information contained in the alphabetical and classified sections. Advertising page numbers are indicated opposite the classified and alphabetical listings of advertisers and, in addition, your attention is invited to the classified Business Cards beginning on page 1133. For other classifications of advertisers see Table of Contents on page 3.

Canada now manufactures a wider range of high grade products than ever before, so—"Buy Canadian—Buy Quality".

The publishers wish to thank the manufacturers, government departments, and other organizations who have furnished information upon which this book is based.

MACK molds for the leaders

Leaders of industry count on MACK for precision plastic molding. Many of these have been steady MACK customers for over a quarter of a century. Complete satisfaction from mold design to finished product is the reason why MACK enjoys a reputation for reliability in plastic molding. Whether your production involves large or small quantities in simple or intricate designs, the name MACK is assurance of finished-right, priced-right and delivered-on-time molded plastics.

Let MACK figure it in plastics

It's good business to let MACK figure on your plastic molding needs because MACK is one of the original plastic molders. Years of experience in design, mold making, choice of materials and finishing mean sound, economical production from start to completion. MACK engineers are available for consultation. They will recommend the one best design and the most efficient method of producing your finished plastic product or component part. Estimates will be made without obligation; call or write, today.

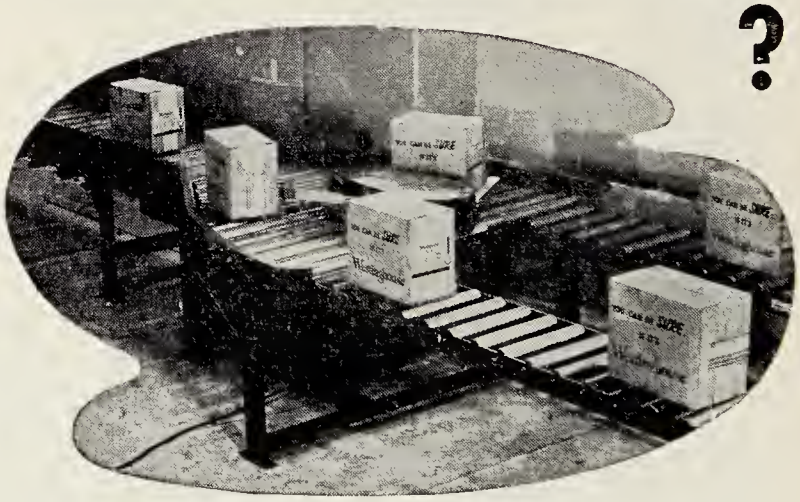
"The FINEST CONVEYOR we have ever used... More rugged, therefore smoother operating—"

Says Mr. Donald Faller of Samsonite of Canada Ltd., Stratford, Ont.

This Rolmaster conveyor is a flat bed PowerPact belt 162½ ft. long—just a part of 3500 ft. of gravity and 500 ft. of Rolmaster Conveyors in Samsonite's new Canadian plant. They find Rolmaster the finest conveyors because of exclusive features such as: All main rolls have sealed-for-life bearings; Easily adjusted and accessible belt take-up arrangement; Precision manufactured (micrometer check to .001" tolerance) ribbed roll keeps belt in perfect alignment.

A. & C. Boehmer Ltd.

SAVE SPACE LABOUR MONEY



with this ingenious

Rolmaster

INSTALLATION

This well-known Kitchener box-making firm wanted the convenience and economy of a floor-to-floor conveyor WITHOUT any sacrifice of floor space. The pictures above show how Rolmaster solved the problem: (A) shipping-receiving shed at ground level with boxes on the way up (or down); (B) external sloping shaft enclosing the conveyor; (C) 3rd floor gravity conveyor with boxes coming around curve from shaft. There is a similar installation at the 2nd floor. Result: ...Rolmaster labour-and-money-saving convenience with NO sacrifice of floor space.

WHY NOT GET WHAT YOU'RE PAYING FOR ?

Using old-fashioned methods to handle and move materials, merchandise, cartons, cases, crates, bags, parts, almost anything can (and usually does) increase costs far beyond what a Rolmaster Conveyor installation amounts to. Would you like to find out exactly how much a Rolmaster will save you? We'll be glad to give you the information, without obligation. In the meantime, write or phone for our interesting catalog, illustrated at right.

Engineering Ingenuity

The Canadian beaver shows engineering ingenuity of a high order. With his paws, his sharp teeth and his tail he builds dams to ensure a water depth of about three feet, which serves to contain and protect his house.

To overcome some of the many problems we at Runnymede Steel have faced in the building of bridges and in the erection of steel structures for office, factory and apartment buildings, we had to use every bit of engineering ingenuity at our command. That's quite a bit. It represents forty years of steel construction on big and small jobs, on challenging jobs and run-of-the-mill jobs.

And, like the beaver, we often have to race against and beat a deadline.

Let us prove that to you by giving us the opportunity to quote on your next project.

If it's steel you need, call Runnymede

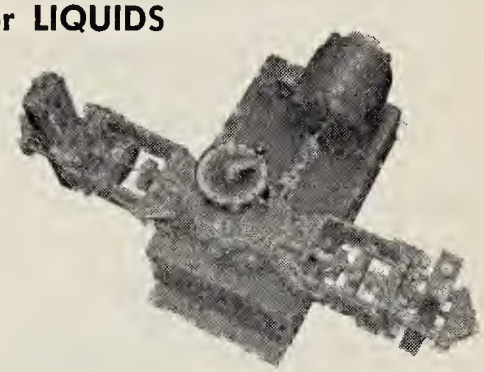
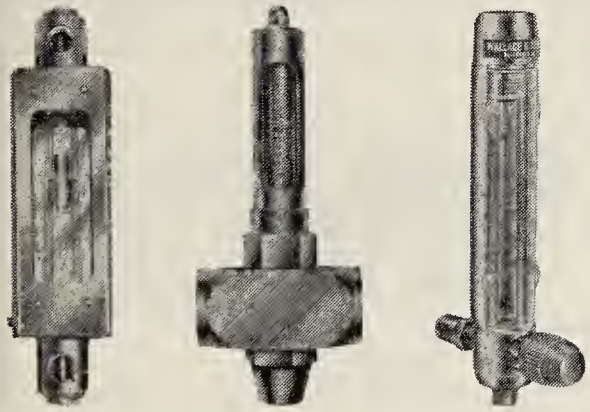
W&T WALLACE & TIERNAN FEED...PUMP...CONTROL

...With Wallace & Tiernan Industrial Metering Equipment



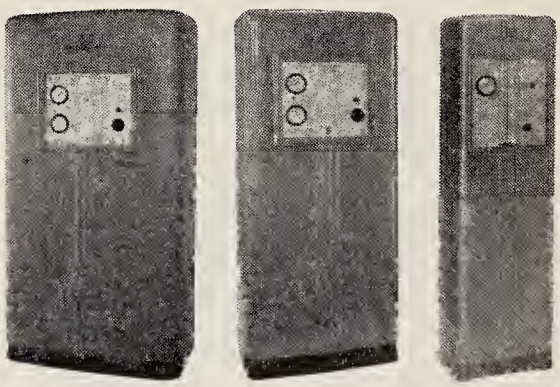
If you have solids, liquids, or gases moving through your plant, your process, Wallace & Tiernan equipment handles them automatically . . . cleanly . . . efficiently.

For DRY, FREE-FLOWING SOLIDS



W&T electric and pneumatic feeders handle up to 1½" particle sizes. Gravimetrics feed 1 to 180,000 lbs./hr; volumetrics, 0.001 to 3600 cfh. Famous Merchen Feeder and Massometer transmit proportional flow signals to other equipment . . . give cantinuaus blending, sure-fire process control.

For LIQUIDS



even carrosive or viscous liquids, W&T Plunger Metering Pumps are designed for long life and convenience in operation and maintenance. Capacities range from 0.54 to 1124.5 gph against up to 4000 psi for each liquid end. Several liquid ends or drive units may be ganged to give greater capacities or prapartional blending. Flow signals from other feeding equipment control pumping rate through a pneumatic cantroller.

For LIQUIDS and GASES

W&T Varea-meters (ratameters) solve tricky flaw-measuring problems. Glass-tube models handle most fluids; metal-tube meters give extra safety in hazardous service. Varea-meter capacities up to 277 gpm of water, and 1,333 scfm of air. Electric ar pneumatic transmitters control ather pracess equipment.

For CHLORINE GAS

V-notch Chlorinators feed 0.5 to 8000 lbs. chlorine per day. Chlorination disinfects process waters, prevents slime, reduces maintenance shutdawns. V-natch Variable-Orifice gives precise and wide-range feeding, lends itself to manual or autamated control. Similar equipment feeds ammania and sulfur diaxide.

. . . And this equipment is only part of Wallace & Tiernan's industrial line. Other products include pressure sensitive instruments and diaphragm pumps.

If you have a feeding, controlling, or measuring problem, Wallace & Tiernan can help you. Write Dept. 61.28-A.

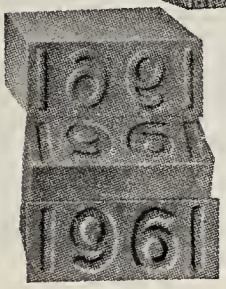
METAL MARKING TOOLS

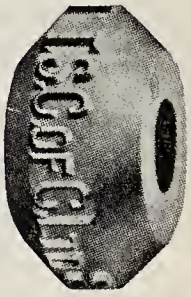


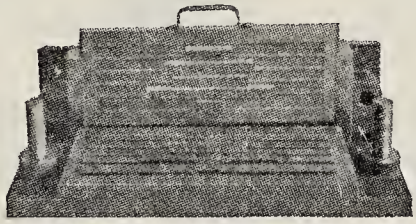
STEEL HAND STAMPS

Used for marking oll types of products, whether surface is round, flat, concave or convex — with trade marks, names, numbers and other important date.

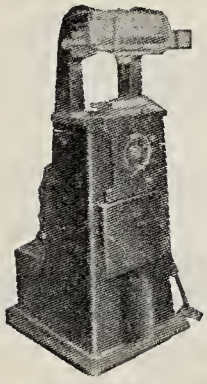
INTERCHANGEABLE STEEL TYPE

Most economical — most flexible! Steel type holders are ruggedly and compactly constructed. Interchangeable steel type is accurotely finished, hardened steel, for light or medium duty marking.

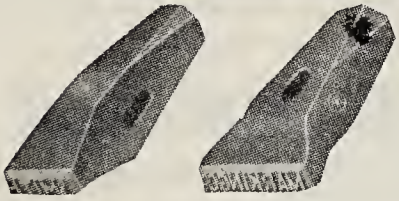




ROLL DIES

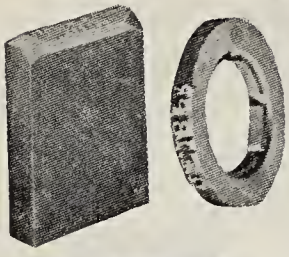


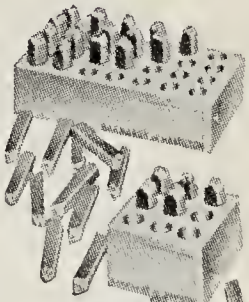
The use of engraved roll dies is the standard method for production marking of machine parts, hardwore, cutlery, etc. Particularly legible marking is secured.

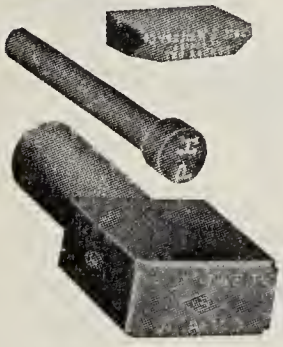


EMBOSSING DIES

Roised or sunk lettering or designs accurately reproduced. Indestructible lettering and trade marks reproduced on metal drums and parts.







POWER MARKING MACHINES

Self contoined heavy duty morking machines with smooth cushioned hydroulic pressure eliminate contact shock with marking tools thus insuring tool life. From the problems of specialized marking to the most routine of marking operations, this is o machine to help you "make your mark".

BEARIUM METAL . . .

NOW AVAILABLE IN CANADA

Non-Seizing and Non-Scoring . . . Long Life . . . High Compressive Strength . . . Self-Lubricating . . . Low Coefficient of Friction . . . Resistant to Shock Loads . . . Sound, Uniform Structure . . . Free-Cutting.

Available in rough cast bars, individual castings and completely machined parts

YOUR BEST BUY IN BEARING BRONZE

Even where water must be used as the only lubricant, BEARIUM METAL does not seize or score the shaft. The reason is that BEARIUM METAL, because of its superior frictional properties, is self-lubricating. Secret of its amazing performance is due to the uniform distribution of microscopic particles within the copper-tin grains rather than between the grain boundaries as found in ordinary bronzes. So, if you have a bearing requirement which calls for dependable, trouble-free performance—then BEARIUM METAL is your best buy in bearing bronze.

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC

First name in Telecommunications and Industrial Electrical Control

Automatic Electric is a world-wide organization with manufacturing affiliates in the U.S.A., Canada, Belgium and Italy. It has been a pioneer in such developments as the dial telephone, long distance switching and industrial electrical controls.

Automatic Electric (Canada) Limited has been manufacturing telecommunications equipment at Brockville, Ontario, since 1935. The present factory, one of the most modern in Canada, has been expanded to over 200,000 square feet. Early in 1960 a Branch Manufacturing operation was opened in Lethbridge, Alberta.

Close attention to the specific needs of the power and communications industries established the N. Slater Company as Canada's leader in the manufacture of Pole Line Hardware. Continual research and development maintains that lead, to the advantage of all who are engaged in the vital distribution of overhead or underground power and telephone services, and Extra High Voltage transmission.

In addition, Slater can offer a matchless service for the custom production of Stampings and Forgings in any quantity, from your own designs, blueprints or samples. We can make the tools or dies required, or adapt your present tooling to our equipment. The Slater service includes hot-dip galvanizing, paint or vitreous enamel finishing, to suit your needs.

The many shapes of FORGING

The many shapes of QUALITY

The shape may be simple or complex, large or small. It may be a shaft, rod, lever, arm, fork, gear, bar, bracket or spindle. It may weigh one ounce or 300 lbs. It may be produced in quantities of 15 or 150,000. It may ultimately be used in a Canadian automobile or an Australian aircraft.

It pays to do business with Dominion, one of North America's great forging organizations. For Dominion Forge offers you a combination of quality, quick service, skilled manpower and 50 years of forging experience unsurpassed on the continent. A Dominion forging engineer will be pleased to talk with you about your requirements, at any time.

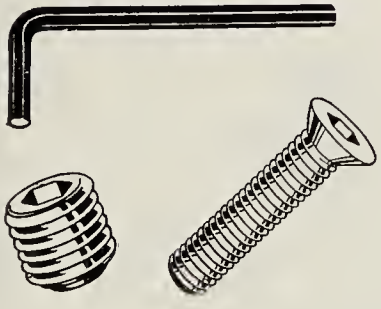
Then Look to ACME

STANDARD SCREW PRODUCTS



Supplied From Stock

Cap screws, set screws, S.F. nuts . . . these in their untold thousands make up the products that are termed "Standard" in our industry. Wherever your specifications call for fasteners, check the Acme catalogue for complete data. Chances are, that an Acme Standard will fill the bill economically and satisfactorily.

SPECIAL SCREW PRODUCTS
In Quantities to Order

Perhaps it's a non-standard item . . . or a tiny fastener that hasn't been designed or machined to exact dimensions. Then again, it might be that a complete modification of a sub-assembly is required. At any rate, investigation will reveal the trouble and Acme's Screw Product Division can help you solve it to your satisfaction.

ALLEN HEX-SOCKET CAP AND SET SCREWS AND KEYS

Allen Hex-Socket Cap and Set Screws are in constant demand because of their rugged, wear-resisting strength. Also available from stock are Allen Dowel Pins, Shoulder Screws and Key and Screw Assortments.

Bauer

Manufacturers of Pulp and Paper Machinery

Bauer Centri-Cleaners are offered to the industry for high removal of impurities from pulp. We shall gladly recommend the correct units and plan your system for the best installation of Bauer Cleaners.

Bauer double and single revolving disc refiners, as well as plates, are now manufactured in our expanded Brantford plant to meet your needs.

Plastisol Coating

Our plastisol coating facilities are ready to serve you. Plastisol coating, either sprayed or dipped, gives protection against abrasion and corrosion. Examples of the many things that can be coated are duct work, fan blades, plating racks, tanks, etc.

Contact us for information.

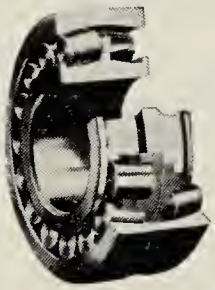
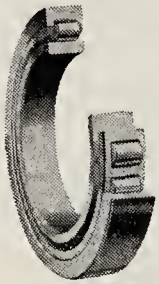
One of these Torrington Bearings may solve a design problem for you...

Type DC Needle Bearing is suitable for applications where size, weight and cost must be held to a minimum.



Type NBC Needle Bearing is designed for aircraft applications to be used in conjunction with standard AN bolts.

Type PN (Double Row) Needle Bearing meets all aircraft pulley requirements for primary control applications.



Type CR Needle Bearing is designed for cam follower service and rolling loads, where outer race is not supported by housing.

Self-Aligning Spherical Roller Bearing is designed for heavy-duty applications to meet conditions of misalignment.

Double Row Tapered Roller Bearing carries heavy radial and thrust loads where maximum stability is required.

Single Row Straight Roller Bearing is adaptable for high radial loads where simplicity of design, assembly and maintenance are important.

Type HD Needle Bearing is particularly suitable for severe load applications and the most exacting service conditions.

It may not have occurred to you that there are so many different types of Torrington Bearings—or that the completeness of the line of these modern, anti-friction bearings makes them adaptable to many design requirements.

Pictured above are eight different types—and there are others, all different in design, to assure you a wide choice to meet any specific requirement. Each is engineered for a particular task—or combination of design requirements. Individually each offers the same characteristic advantages of unit design, anti-friction operation, high capacity, efficient lubrication, simple installation and maintenance.

The result is that in almost any application where Torrington Bearings are employed the design problem is simplified; operating efficiency and service life are increased; manufacturing costs are reduced; and sales features are added.

Investigate for yourself how the advantages of Torrington's complete line of anti-friction bearings can be of assistance in your product planning. Full information is available on request, and our engineering staff is ready to help you with any design requirement.

PROTECTION FOR YOU!

The "R" Shield Watermark is a symbol of protection for you whenever you buy stationery and printing papers. It signifies a high standard of quality set up many years ago and maintained unswervingly ever since. Thus it is your guarantee that every sheet you buy bearing the "R" Shield Watermark is the best in its class which traditional skill can produce with the aid of modern science and machinery.

SARCO STEAM TRAPS

Only Sarco makes 5 distinctly different types of traps—can give you impartial trapping recommendations. For best trapping results, fit the trap to the requirements of the job.

Sarco Balanced Pressure Thermostatic Traps. Greatest capacity per dollar cost. Large air venting capacity. Same head and seat, 0-300 psi. Freeze-proof. Size ⅜" to 2", for pressures to 300 psi. Catalog 250-A.

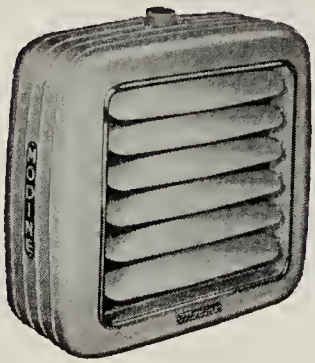
Sarco Camlift Bucket Traps. New, powerful Camlift valve mechanism permits greater discharge with no increase in size of trap body. Sizes ½" to 2", for pressures to 900 psi. Catalog 360-A.

Sarco Float-Thermostatic Traps. Discharges condensate continuously at steam temperature and without shock. Responds immediately to varying loads and pressures. Sizes ¾" to 2½", for pressures to 200 psi. Catalog 450-A.

Sarco Thermodynamic Traps. Valve head, a solid stn. st. disc, is only moving part. Same head and seat to 600 psi. Not affected by super-heat, water-hammer, corrosive condensate. Sizes ⅜", ½", ¾", and 1", for pressures to 600 psi. Catalog 255-A.

Sarco Liquid Expansion Thermostatic Traps. Adjustable to discharge condensate below 212°F. Freeze-proof. Not affected by water-hammer or pressure pulsations. Sizes ½" to 2", for pressures to 350 psi. Catalog 260-A.

SARCO Heating Specialties



Type H Radiator Trap

Sarco Radiator Traps and Valves for maximum heating efficiency and long trouble-free service. Complete line of specialties includes air eliminators, boiler return traps and balancing fittings. Catalog 150-A.

SARCO Strainers

Protects trap and valve mechanisms from damage by dirt or scale in pipe lines. For all commercial pressures and fluids. Sizes ¼" to 10". Catalog 1200-A.

SARCO Temperature Controllers

A complete line of Self-Powered Controllers for water heaters, converters, and all types of process work. Simple, reliable, inexpensive. Sizes ½" to 8", temperature ranges between 0° and 300°F. Catalog 600-A.

Sarco Electric Indicating Temperature Controllers for controlling electric heating elements, steam, water, oil, brine, gas, air and other heating or cooling operations where continuous indication of controlled temperature is required. Temperatures minus 90° to plus 650°F. Catalog 1025.

TR-21 Controller

MODINE UNIT HEATERS

A complete line for horizontal or vertical air delivery as well as a power-throw type.

Discharge air temperatures of 110° to 120°F are correctly related to air velocities for perfect heating comfort with lower fuel costs. Safe and economical direct-from-pipe suspension.

Compare and you will agree that Modine is tops in unit heater values. Write for Catalog No. 155.

YOUR MAN IN LONDON

or anywhere in the world!

Expert on export... at your service!

Around the world, more than 120 Canadian Government Trade Commissioners are on the lookout for new buyers for Canadian goods.

In London, The Trade Commissioner provided assistance to Canadian firms in selling women's dresses and sportswear. In Cairo, it was newsprint. In Mexico City, powdered milk. And in Hong Kong, stainless steel.

Your man, the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, is in constant touch with the leaders of business and government in his area, and of course, he has access to all factual market data.

When you require specific information on any market, you are invited to call upon the services of the Trade Commissioner—either direct, or through this Department in Ottawa.

If you wish, you may receive this Department's semi-monthly publication, "Foreign Trade", which carries on-the-spot reports from Canada's Trade Commissioners. Subscriptions (at $2.00 per year in Canada) should be sent to the Queen's Printer, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE, OTTAWA, CANADA

Foreword

by Hon. George Hees, M.P.
Minister of Trade and Commerce

Trade promotion is a major responsibility of government and industry in a free-enterprise economy, particularly in a country that depends to such a material extent on exports.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association has co-operated handsomely with the Department of Trade and Commerce in providing its members with a clear understanding of the factors that must be taken into consideration by prospective exporters, and in outlining the services that are so readily available. This was clearly illustrated during the Export Trade Promotion Conference last December, the large attendance at which can be attributed in full measure to the assistance rendered by trade associations.

It is appropriate that the Canadian Trade Index should include an Export Section, which is of particular value to firms who have never previously considered foreign markets as outlets for their products. It outlines the importance of export trade, describes the methods and practices involved in trading with foreign countries, and provides information on the services available to Canadian companies that export or want to export.

The Export Section enables the Department of Trade and Commerce to remind businessmen of its interest in promoting export trade, and of the various techniques employed in attracting the attention of prospective purchasers in all parts of the world. In this connection, copies of the Canadian Trade Index are distributed by trade commissioners to government officials and businessmen, thereby directing their attention to Canada as a desirable source of supply.

In the final analysis, the development of trade and the completion of sales is the responsibility of individual firms. This is dependent on competitive pricing, comparative quality, reliable delivery and, not least, earnestness of effort.

To all companies able to meet the conditions of export, I commend the careful reading of this Export Section, and pledge the help of federal government services.

EXPORTING IS A CHALLENGE

FOREIGN trade is one of the pillars of Canadian prosperity, and offers a challenge to enterprising firms engaged in the production of commodities for which markets may be found in other countries. Canada is in fourth position among trading nations of the world, and the preservation of her stable economy depends to a large extent on the ability to export the products of her factories, fields, fisheries, forests and her mines. As more than twenty per cent of the Gross National Product consists of goods and services supplied to other lands, it is readily apparent that a large proportion of Canada's population is engaged, directly or indirectly, in foreign trade. During the last thirty years, there has been a gradual shift in the composition of our exports from raw to processed materials. Articles classed as chiefly manufactured now represent 37 per cent of the total, while semi-processed materials account for 29 per cent and raw materials for only 34 per cent.

Export trade yields the best returns to firms that maintain continuity of supply. Experience has shown that those most likely to succeed are engaged in a well-established domestic trade, and have an assured production which permits them to create a favourable reputation and develop a demand for their products in other lands.

Experience is the prime requisite for any individual embarking on export trade, followed by capital. The latter may be dissipated rapidly without the former. Foreign tariff and import restrictions, transportation procedure, currency and finance problems, packaging and documentation are a few of the shoals on which a venture into uncharted waters may founder. Capital is necessary to tide over the intervals between the time that services are rendered or shipments made and payments are received, as well as to meet the unexpected demands that may be experienced. However, with the assistance and guidance readily available to businessmen, the problems are not as complex as is sometimes feared.

Prospective exporters might well consider the following fundamental questions before embarking on what can prove to be a rewarding voyage of discovery:

Does our business lend itself to export, or are the products we manufacture suited only to the domestic market?

Does the capacity of our plant meet the domestic and possible foreign demand for our product? What proportion of the output can be made available for shipment abroad on a continuing basis?

What countries are presently purchasing products similar to those being manufactured in our plant?

What is the volume of their purchases, and their sources of supply?

Are these items being imported because of the fact that they are not being produced in the countries concerned, or on account of a temporary shortage?

If similar products are being made in the countries where a consumer demand exists, are local manufacturers protected by a tariff on imports, by import quotas, or by some other device?

Does some special feature of the Canadian product provide a marketing and merchandising advantage in foreign countries?

Are payment problems likely to be experienced, due to a shortage of dollars?

Are shipping services adequate, and transportation costs sufficiently low to overcome possible domestic competition and that from other countries?

Which markets have a growth potential?

What Canadian firms are presently exporting to the countries concerned, and are Canadian products highly regarded?

Are there any Canadian export regulations that apply to the products it is proposed to export?

Export trade has national significance. It involves a live interest in the countries concerned, courtesy in the transaction of business with overseas customers, integrity, and a continuity of vigorous service, which contribute to the creation of a favourable reputation for the firm and its representatives. Goodwill engendered by one or more Canadian companies also leads to the development of friendly relations with Canada.

IMPORTANT POINTS FOR SUCCESSFUL EXPORTING

1. Make long-term export plans.
2. Make the right products which the export markets want.
3. Use the correct export costing system and prices to the customers which enable them to figure out easily how much the goods will cost them.
4. Offer reasonable credit terms.
5. Get people who have the "know-how" on export and know languages.
6. Visit customers through regular trips overseas, and do not attempt to organize exports from the desk in the home office.
7. Support these travels by multi-language sales promotional literature, by advertising, and by exhibiting at local Trade Fairs, etc.
8. Use the right psychological approach and try to establish more personal and humanized relationships with overseas customers.
9. Avoid high-pressure sales tactics or any artificial enthusiasm.

THE "HOW TO" OF EXPORT

A SUCCESSFUL venture into the export field involves much more than simply an extension of domestic sales activity. Each market has its own peculiarities of tastes, customs and business methods, and the general practice of export has its own specialized techniques. A full understanding of these matters, and an appreciation of the problems faced by the overseas customer in being so far removed from his source of supply, is vital.

A brief outline of some of the principles and methods to be employed is given in the following sections. Expert assistance in his problems is available to the exporter at every stage, and later chapters are devoted to the export services of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Department of Trade and Commerce. This material is not intended as a comprehensive manual of export practice but its purpose is to indicate broadly some of the matters to which the exporter or prospective exporter should give his attention.

EXPORT DISTRIBUTION AND MARKETING

By Ivan E. Lenard, M.I.Ex., Executive Director, International Patented Products.

Export business can be undertaken and organized in many ways. Generally speaking, the penetration of foreign markets will start by making shipments abroad from the Canadian plant and later on the nature and volume of business might justify manufacturing abroad, either under license or by direct investment in factories located abroad.

The first step to be considered can be placed under the general heading of market information. It is essential to obtain accurate background information about the markets where business is contemplated. Market surveys can take many forms, depending on the information required. They vary from the most simple questionnaires covering such basic matters as: import restrictions; prevailing local prices; volume of current business; etc.; to highly specialized surveys to establish precise detailed information.

Basic data required in the initial stages leading to decisions as to whether business is possible, can be supplied through many channels, including the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the chartered banks, etc. To provide information for more sophisticated market surveys requires either personal visits to the market or the services of foreign trade consultants, international market survey organizations and in some cases a combination of all.

The results of the market survey should also determine the best methods to be employed for obtaining maximum distribution. Distribution methods will vary considerably, depending on the characteristics of the market, as well as the product involved. Because of territorial and geographic considerations in some areas, no one agent or representative can assure adequate coverage. In some large European countries, or nations the size of India, it is usually desirable to deal with separate areas as individual market units within the total territory. These considerations might also arise in smaller countries, although in most cases it is possible to locate companies which can offer national distribution for most products.

There are many types of organizations available which should be considered before definite marketing plans are decided upon. Some of the better recognized export distribution organizations are: export agents or brokers located in Canada; commission agents; importer-wholesalers; distributors.

Export Agents or Brokers Located in Canada

Most of the major centres of Canada have a number of companies specialized in export distribution. These companies vary from large international trading organizations, specializing in a few products, to companies dealing with a wide variety of merchandise. In some cases these organizations purchase for their own account and pay cash on delivery in Canada for all transactions, while others develop business on a commission or fee basis.

Some of these companies specialize in certain markets only, while others have connections in most important export markets. Some have their own offices abroad but in most cases export companies in Canada employ local agents abroad. By representing a number of Canadian exporters they are in a position to spread travel and other expenses, thus enabling the Canadian manufacturer to benefit from lower overhead expenses, as well as specialized export knowledge. In most cases credit risks are either completely eliminated or reduced to the absolute minimum. Export agents can also cut down on transportation expenses by combining shipments and thus obtaining the most favourable freight rates.

There are also a number of export companies in Canada operating as combination export managers. Such companies act for the manufacturer as his own export department would do. Doing export work for a number of manufacturers, overhead expenses are shared and the manufacturer does not have to employ export staff of his own.

Commission Agents

Most countries offer a large number of organizations who represent foreign companies on a commission basis. These companies act as the manufacturer's own sales staff. In small countries these companies will handle a wide variety of products. In larger countries and more complex marketing territories, these companies become highly specialized in the types of goods they handle. In some European and Latin American countries, specialization reaches a high degree, whereby a commission agent in textiles, for example, will deal only in printed cotton goods.

Commission agencies vary considerably in size. They might be one-man operations, or they could employ over 100 salesmen of their own. In most cases, the established firms in the country have wide connections in the trade. They are very familiar with the basic requirements of the market. They sell direct to wholesalers, or in some cases direct to retailers, and expect to be reimbursed with a commission already included in the price offered to their customers. Rates of commission will fluctuate from a fraction of one percent to as much as 15% or 20%, depending on the product involved, the established customs in the trade and the functions the commission agent is expected to perform.

Depending on the arrangements concluded, the commission agent might be prepared to bear all costs of advertising, or leave such expenses to the manufacturer. In some cases the agent will be responsible for credit, while in other agreements all credit risks are to be the concern of the exporter. In the latter case, the exporter has the right to confirm or reject orders received from the commission agent.

Importer-Wholesalers

In many countries there are companies who purchase for their own account and offer distribution throughout an area in which they operate. In some small countries these organizations can offer national distribution but in larger countries, they will restrict their activities to a very specific marketing area. Generally speaking one can expect a reasonably high degree of specialization. These companies also employ a number of salesmen and sell direct to retail outlets. It is not uncommon for such companies to have a chain of retail outlets of their own, in addition to selling to other retailers in the trade.

Purchases will be made for the importer's own account and in such cases it is quite customary for the importer-wholesaler to undertake some advertising. Advertising and point of sale promotion expenses might be exclusively for the importer's account, or the exporter might allow for a promotion arrangement based on volume or some other consideration.

As a general rule, these companies expect to be appointed on an exclusive basis for a definite period of time. If most of the advertising is for the exporter's account, it might be possible to make non-exclusive arrangements. These companies can be expected to provide full service if the product involved requires some maintenance or periodic replacement of parts.

Distributors

The function of distributors differs greatly from country to country and from product to product. Generally speaking, distributors import direct only after the line has already been well introduced and offers reasonable turnover. In most cases distributors will not undertake direct advertising but will be active in the sales promotion field. This type of organization will engage in the highest degree of specialization and offers opportunities for the deepest market penetration. Exclusivity in clearly defined marketing areas might, in some cases, be requested, although it is not uncommon to be able to deal with most, if not all, distributors in the trade.

Except in most unusual cases, credit terms will be requested. These will vary in length of time, depending on general economic conditions prevalent in the country. Particularly since the end of World War II, some distributors expect a fair proportion of their inventory to be financed by the exporter.

While the clearly defined marketing facilities outlined above are based on generalization, in many countries some of these functions tend to overlap. A combination of functions can be attained for some products in some markets. Each case should be closely examined and all factors carefully analyzed before binding commitments are agreed upon. In some countries the laws offer definite protection to local agents and make it extremely difficult to make changes in agency arrangements.

Generally speaking a commission agent or importer might be prepared to restrict his activities to the products of one manufacturer only in the field, particularly when the arrangement is of an exclusive nature. Distributors on the other hand will likely handle competitive products as well.

Often local manufacturers are prepared to act for the sale of allied products not manufactured by themselves. Such arrangements can lead to subsequent licensing agreements for manufacturing in the country involved. The advantages of dealing with an allied local manufacturer could be considerable and should lead to exchange of technical information, product development, etc.

Packing and Packaging

It is the responsibility of the exporter to see to it that goods shipped abroad arrive in good condition. Facilities for loading and unloading differ greatly in many ports of the world. In most cases today vessels can unload alongside, although there are still many important ports in the world where cargo must be lightered. Under any circumstances allowance must be made for adequate packing before the goods leave the manufacturer. To some extent the extra cost of heavy packing, where necessary, may be offset by the high local resale value of packing material.

Air cargo is becoming a most important factor in foreign trade. Savings can be instituted, not only by elimination of heavy packing, but also by reducing local inventory costs through the shortening of the supply line.

Local tastes and preferences should be carefully considered in packaging. Wherever possible, printing should be in the language of the country of destination. Some countries impose a package tax when goods are landed and these considerations could be of utmost importance in meeting existing competition.

Sales Training

One of the most difficult problems facing the exporter is to provide adequate training to the people abroad who are expected to sell his product. The problem becomes multiplied when the product involved requires a degree of technical background and after-sales service. Language difficulties in translating installation or service literature also tend to complicate the picture.

Some companies solve this problem by inviting key personnel of overseas representatives to spend some time in Canada and obtain the necessary technical background first hand. Such trained personnel are then expected to educate sales and service staff locally. The cost of such training is usually borne by the exporter. Other companies employ travelling company representatives who do the training abroad. Travelling service representatives, on the payroll of the manufacturer, can also fill a most useful function.

The importance of clearly worded technical literature in the local language can not be overemphasized. In certain cases it is possible to have technical instructions permanently marked on the product in question and these should be, wherever possible, in the local language or dialect.

Training of Home Office Export Personnel

Export trade is becoming more and more the function of specialists. It is commonly believed that it is better to have an export specialist than a person very familiar with the product to be sold abroad. This is based on the theory that the export specialist will be able to obtain the necessary product knowledge more rapidly than would be the case in reverse.

Facilities in Canada for the training of export personnel are better than ever. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association organizes monthly meetings of Export Study Clubs in Toronto and Montreal. The University of Toronto offers, on a national basis, a home study, two year diploma course, under the auspices of the Institute of Export. Evening lecture study courses are offered in Montreal.

FINANCING EXPORT TRADE

By C. K. Highmoor, former Assistant General Manager, The Canadian Bank of Commerce (now retired.)

EVERY experienced Canadian exporter will agree that the sale of Canadian goods or services to a country outside Canada is not completed satisfactorily until the full amount of the anticipated proceeds have been placed at his disposal in Canada and in such form that without any encumbrance they can be used in Canada to pay for the wages, materials and other expenses which went into the creation of the goods or services sold. It takes time, effort and materials to produce goods which will compete in other lands with the products of other countries and no matter what care is taken in the preparation of the goods, in their prompt and safe delivery, and in following through to see that the goods are satisfactory to the eventual user, the benefit to the producer and to Canada is likely to be lost if similar care is not taken in the manner in which the proceeds are collected from abroad.

All Canadian banks operate International or Foreign Departments designed to facilitate transactions with other countries, whether these involve payments abroad or collections abroad, and exporters, particularly those expanding their activities into new fields abroad, should avail themselves of the services of their banks in guarding against errors and oversights which can be made in this important matter of obtaining payment in satisfactory form from purchasers of their products, whether in near or distant lands.

Price Quotations

Exporters from Canada seeking buyers abroad are free to express their prices in any form or in any currency which they may desire or find convenient, though naturally they must take into account also the convenience of the buyer. The currency in which they collect the proceeds is no longer a matter in which they are restricted by exchange control regulations in Canada and the principal consideration in the choice is whether the currency tendered is freely convertible in world markets to Canadian dollars or freely transferable in foreign currency to Canadian account. The position with respect to convertibility and transferability is subject to change but is followed closely and always known by all Canadian banks.

Risks of Fluctuation in Exchange Rates

The value in terms of Canadian dollars of all foreign currencies is subject to exchange fluctuations even under Control conditions as no one, not even Governments, can guarantee that current rates of exchange will remain unchanged over any stated period. To some extent these risks can be eliminated both under Control and open market conditions, by means of forward contracts. Canadians buying and selling goods abroad can enter into forward contracts with their banks for reasonable periods ahead and this is well worth considering particularly when they have a firm contract with a buyer or seller abroad. When a forward contract is entered into to deliver or take delivery of a stated amount of foreign exchange, the exchange risk is eliminated but such contracts must be completed at maturity and for the amount contracted regardless of the market rates then prevailing.

Clarity of Contracts

It is most desirable that a commercial contract entered into between seller and buyer shall be clear beyond doubt as to the expense included in the selling price and as to the currency and manner in which the transfer of money from abroad to Canada shall take place. Apart from the sales cost of the goods at the point of production in Canada, there are of course other costs, such as rail and ocean freight, marine and war risk insurance, export license fees, possible storage, transshipment, inspection, wharfage, forwarding, and other similar costs with which every exporter is familiar, but also financing costs such as collection fees, interest, bill stamp duties, and sometimes other costs such as telegraphic fees, protest fees, consular fees, etc., which can be important and should not be overlooked.

It is possible for many of these to be foreseen, avoided, overcome, or at least provided for, at the time the contract is entered into, or in advance to last over a long period of time in the prospective dealings with an overseas buyer. In these latter respects Canadian banks can be most helpful and should be freely consulted.

Financial Standing of Buyer Abroad

It is obviously important for the seller of Canadian goods to know something of the standing of buyers abroad not only from the point of view of moral reputation but also from a financial point of view and before considering the completion of any contract with strangers abroad it is desirable that enquiries should be made to that end. The Canadian banks, Government departments, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Export Credits Insurance Corporation, and other organizations have considerable information on the standing of firms abroad and can always assist in this respect even if enquiries have to be made abroad by mail or by wire. Upon this information depends to no little extent the choice of methods by which payment is to be sought and which in turn requires thought as to the extension of any credit which is to be granted. This in turn depends on the seller's own financial ability to wait, the financial ability of the buyer to pay, the custom of the market into which the goods are to proceed, the Exchange Control regulations governing payment from that market, and the financial reserves of the buying country.

Methods of Payment

There are a number of methods by which payment can be received for shipments abroad and each has its appropriate place in a given set of circumstances.

The simplest, from the Canadian seller's point of view, is a remittance through banking channels at the time of acceptance of an order, in the appropriate currency, but this is a method which would be considered unreasonable by many buyers under normal conditions and one which few exporters would be able or care to require, particularly from firms of standing who would probably be unwilling to so employ their capital, having in mind that the goods may take some time to be prepared and shipped. Then again, under the Exchange

Control regulations of their respective countries, buyers may be prohibited from making payment until the goods have either landed at their ports or are at least afloat.

A variation of this method is by direct remittance in the appropriate currency through banking channels when the goods have arrived, within a stated time thereafter, at time of shipment, or at some period mutually arranged between buyer and seller.

Another method is by drawing a draft on the buyers of the goods or their agents in the country of destination or elsewhere and lodging the draft for collection with a bank in Canada with or without shipping documents attached and either awaiting the returns of the collection by mail, air letter, air mail, or cable, or by borrowing thereagainst in Canada at the time the draft is lodged with the Canadian bank.

Still another method is to call for a Commercial Letter of Credit issued by the buyer's bankers and forwarded by mail to the seller or advised by cable through a bank in Canada.

The latter two methods are discussed more fully below under their respective headings.

Collections

Collections can be expressed in any currency but under present conditions are usually expressed in the currency agreed upon between buyer and seller according to his contract and as required under exchange control regulations of the buyer's country. They can call for payment on demand, at sight, or at an appropriate term, such as 30 days' sight, 60 days' sight, 90 days' sight, etc. They can be clean, i.e. not supported by any documents, or can have attached whatever shipping documents are desired.

If a company attaches a complete set of proper invoices, negotiable bills of lading, marine and war risk insurance certificates or policies for an adequate amount, and other documents required for the release of the goods in the country of destination, and these documents are endorsed where required by the seller, the collection normally controls and retains the ownership of the goods until by permission they are released or until the draft is paid.

When delivering a collection to a bank, the amount of the draft must be clearly expressed in words and figures, the name and address of the drawee must be clearly given, and the bank must understand clearly whether the collection is to go forward by ordinary mail or air mail. The bank must also be placed in a position to give appropriate instructions to its correspondent abroad and these instructions should cover points which are liable to come up when the draft gets to its destination. The following are examples of some of the instructions which might be given in varying circumstances:

Hold for arrival of goods.

Protest for non-acceptance.

Protest for non-payment.

Collect bank charges.

Waive bank charges if refused by drawee.

Collect at selling rate for demand drafts on . . . Remit proceeds by cable at our expense.

Allow drawee interest at . . . % per annum if paid before maturity.

In case of dishonour, store and insure goods at our expense, cabling promptly.

In case of need, refer to . . . who is hereby empowered to . . . and advise us immediately by air mail (cable).

In some countries it is not the practice of the Exchange Control authorities to make foreign exchange available immediately for collections. In fact, in some of them the documents now have not the same control that they once did and on occasion it is the practice to surrender them against a provisional deposit in the local currency of the country together with the drawees undertaking to assume the risk of exchange fluctuations pending the availability of the appropriate foreign exchange for remittance abroad. The drawers' instructions to the bank should include his agreement to this procedure. Other types of instructions will be needed in certain cases and these will vary with circumstances. The objective should be to see that the collecting bank abroad is not left in doubt as to the action which they should take in possible or likely eventualities.

It is possible for collections to be drawn in such a way that interest is to be collected from the drawee over and above the face amount of the draft and where this is required, it should be enfaced on the draft itself by means of an appropriate clause, such as:

'Payable with interest at the rate of . . . % from date of draft to estimated arrival of return remittance in . . .'

or

'Payable at the collecting bank's selling rate for sight drafts on Canada plus interest at the rate of . . . % from date of draft to estimated date of arrival of return remittance in Canada.'

If remittance is required by cable, the clauses would be changed appropriately. The rate of interest inserted is usually that common in the country of destination.

In many cases, if desired, collections can be discounted with Canadian banks at the time of lodgment and, when expressed in foreign exchange, the proceeds sold to or deposited with the bank. This disposes of the exchange risk if the draft is paid promptly but creates an exchange risk if the draft is dishonoured. The availability for discount of a collection payable abroad depends, of course, upon the currency in which it is drawn, the term of the draft, the documents which are attached, but to a greater extent on the financial standing of the drawer and the drawee.

Letters of Credit

Letters of Credit are extremely useful documents in financing foreign trade and the financing of a very large proportion of world trade is handled by that method. They are most adaptable and can be made to fit the requirements of almost any movement of goods under most circumstances. They vary, therefore, from country to country, from commodity to commodity, and between one method of shipment and another. While contracts in themselves, they do not constitute or replace sales contracts between buyers and sellers, but facilitate the carrying out of the latter. In all cases they carry an obligation of the issuer—in these days usually a bank—but the extent of these obligations varies from one credit to the next, and of course are no better than the standing and reputation of the issuer. It cannot, therefore, be taken for granted that every letter of credit is uniform with every other or that they remove all liability from the beneficiary.

They are at times irrevocable and at others revocable, at times carry the obligation only of the bank abroad, and sometimes carry in addition the obligation not only of the bank abroad but also of a bank in Canada or the United States. They can be opened in such a way that the seller receives payment in Canada without further recourse on him, though never remove the responsibility for the sales contract to be duly and properly fulfilled. On the other hand, they may serve only the purpose of providing prompt cash in Canada with certain rights of recourse in some circumstances.

Their establishment by a bank abroad at the request of the buyer usually involves him in some expense and in the use of his credit, thereby adding some expense to the cost of the goods, so that they cannot, in face of competition, be requested in connection with every sale. The possibility of asking for payment in the form of a letter of credit should not, however, be overlooked and, if it is considered desirable that a letter of credit should be obtained, it is advisable to be somewhat specific in describing the type of letter of credit expected.

When details are received of a letter of credit which has been opened, it is important that its terms be studied and found acceptable. If unacceptable, request for amendment should be made immediately to the buyer so that no difficulty or delay will take place when the time comes to use the letter of credit. It is important also that the terms of the letter of credit be adhered to accurately and thoroughly since all letters of credit have an expiry date, either fixed in advance or at the pleasure of the issuer, and if the drafts and documents, upon presentation to a bank in Canada, are found out of order, the credit may have expired before the documents can be amended or corrected.

Space does not permit of a full description of the types of letters of credit or of all the documents for which they may call and the manner in which they should be prepared. In general, however, these documents must describe the goods at least as well as described in the letter of credit and must be in such negotiable shape that they control fully the eventual delivery of the goods, as well as guard against loss or damage while in transit. With shipments to some countries they often call for drafts on the buyer, though it is more usual for letters of credit to provide for drafts on a particular bank, and one of their important functions is to provide access to the principal money markets of the world so that interest costs involved are on an international level.

EXPORT PRICES

By Richard B. Spiro, former Vice-President, International Division, The Canadian Coleman Company, Limited.

AMONG the so-called three P's of Export —namely Product, Price and Promotion —under the present circumstances of reappearing keen competition, Pricing is of paramount importance. This subject embraces the principles of price calculation and also the method of quotation. The former is, of course, of prime importance in establishing prices which will be competitive in the foreign market, while still allowing an adequate return to the exporter in terms of contributing to the profit of his overall operation. The latter is concerned with the necessity for quoting in such a way that the overseas customer can readily calculate his landed cost and compare it with competitive offerings; in short, making it easy for him to buy.

Calculation of Export Prices

While export prices will necessarily bear a fairly close relationship to domestic prices, and will perhaps need adjustment in the light of prices of competitive merchandise, the theoretically correct method is to calculate prices based on the actual cost of producing, selling and shipping the goods, providing, in addition, for the coverage of general overhead expenses and an adequate net profit.

These costs may be divided into three general classifications:

(1) Direct materials and labour (at standard or normal costs applicable to the product being offered, less drawback of duties paid on imported components or raw materials).

(2) Factory overhead (which should be calculated and apportioned on the basis of the average of the plant capacity occupied in the production of goods for export).

(3) Sales and general overhead.

In every business there are many items of cost which are not especially attributable to any particular phase of the operation, but which must be covered if the business is to operate at all. In tabulating costs for export purposes, every effort should be made to eliminate those costs which do not bear any direct relation to the export operation. The examination can be made particularly searching in those businesses where export sales form only a small proportion of total sales.

The expenses of the export operation itself will include such items as: Export department salaries, travelling expenses, catalogues and promotional literature, export advertising, commissions to travellers and to representatives abroad, transportation to the agreed point of delivery (see below), packing and shipping materials and labour, legal expenses, patents and trademark fees, office supplies, postage and cables, taxes, rent, insurance, interest and exchange, provision for bad debts, etc. The tabulation of the expenses and the preparation of a budgetary Profit and Loss Statement will permit the export executive to arrive at quotations based on factory cost by indicating the percentage mark-up which must be added to factory cost to cover the expenses of the export operations and to produce the desired margin of net profit.

Fixed and Variable Costs

In the analysis of costs and expenses it will be found that certain items will be characterized as fixed charges and are independent of production or sales volume. Others vary directly and automatically with the volume of goods produced and sold, while a third variety may be described as controllable and bears a more or less direct relation to the volume of business. Examples of "fixed" charges are civic taxes, administration, rent, etc. Charges which vary in direct ratio to volume include direct labour and materials, commissions, etc. In the third category are such items as export advertising, travelling expenses, clerical costs, etc.

In a market where very keen competition is being faced, a careful examination of the relationships between these cost categories may be the means of determining whether a price can be quoted which will be competitive, or in other words, whether an export order can be obtained at all. In many organizations, export business represents only a comparatively small percentage of the total turnover and, in such cases, it may be argued that, where necessary, an export price which covers the variable and controllable export costs but disregards all or a portion of the fixed charges will still be profitable from the point of view of the overall operation. In such an organization, it may be assumed that the fixed expenses will be the same whether or not this export business is added to the domestic business. The export order, so obtained, is therefore a means of employing plant capacity, which may not otherwise be profitably engaged, and to absorb a portion, though not by domestic standards its full share, of the fixed expenses of the business.

If, however, export business represents more than, say, 15% to 20% of the total turnover, it may be clearly impossible to charge the whole of the fixed expenses of the organization against that part of the production which is sold in the domestic market, as this may price these products out of the domestic market.

Price Quotations and Foreign Trade Terms

A significant factor in the quotation of prices is the cost of transporting the goods to the point of delivery indicated in the sales contract. This point is designated by certain internationally accepted "foreign trade terms."

The foreign trade terms indicate the geographic point in the line of connection between seller and buyer up to which the seller pays all transportation and insurance costs (or in other words, includes transportation and insurance costs in his quotation) and from which point onwards the buyer pays all transportation or insurance costs (or in other words, from which point onwards the seller adds transportation and insurance costs to his quotation in case he, acting on behalf of the buyer, prepays these expenses). The foreign trade terms further define in the line of connection between seller and buyer the point of delivery, which means the point up to which the seller holds title to the goods and is therefore responsible for them as far as damages, losses, etc., are concerned and where the title then passes from the seller to the buyer, who from this point onwards is responsible for any losses or damages.

As one proceeds along this line of connection from the seller to the buyer, it will progressively become easier for the buyer to calculate his landed costs. If one quotes, for instance, "F.O.B. Factory", which is often called "ex works", then the buyer, in order to arrive at his landed costs, would not only have to figure out his import Customs Duty, the landing charges in his own port of arrival, the ocean freight and marine insurance, but he would also have to know the inland transport in the country of supply such as for instance, the cost of transporting the merchandise from Winnipeg to Montreal; it is quite clear that it would be difficult for the importer in a far-away country to obtain information on the cost of inland rail transport in Canada, which, in the case of an "F.O.B. Factory" or "ex works" quotation would be necessary to permit him to figure out his landed costs. If we quote "F.A.S. Vessel" (Free Along Side) or "F.O.B. Vessel" (Free on Board Vessel) at a named Port of Sailing, then, in order to arrive at his landed costs, he would only have to know the ocean freight rate, marine insurance rate and the actual landing costs and Customs Duties which occur in his own country.

With competition becoming keener all the time and with exporters in other countries used to making it easy for their overseas customers to figure out their landed costs, it has become necessary to proceed in one's quotations along this line of connection between seller and buyer to points closer to the buyer, and to quote prices for delivery at the port of destination such as for instance: C & F (Cost and Freight, which would only leave to the buyer to figure out and pay the marine insurance premium); or: C.I.F. (which means Cost, Insurance excluding war risk insurance, and Freight); or: C.I.F. & C. (which with the last letter "C" includes also the commission which the buyer may possibly pay to a buying house or broker whom he may employ in the country of supply); or, the quotation may even be: C.I.F.C. & I. (which with the last letter "I" indicates that also bank interest, in the case of extended credit terms, is included in the quotation and will not have to be added to the quoted price by the buyer).

Foreign Trade Terms—Definitions

In an effort to define in a uniform manner certain well known terms generally used in making price quotations, there has been developed in various countries a set of rules or definitions which have been adopted by certain trade organizations and others setting out in some detail the obligations of seller and buyer attaching to the particular terms. In the United States the National Foreign Trade Council Incorporated, the National Council of American Importers Incorporated, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America on July 30, 1941, through a joint committee, approved of what are known as "Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions —1941." These follow in general, although not in detail, the International Rules for the Interpretation of Trade Terms — generally known as "Incoterms, 1953," defined by the International Chamber of Commerce. It should be understood that the use of such rules is optional and that the approval of the particular rules referred to by designated trade bodies does not lend to them the force of law. Nevertheless, where a price quotation in accordance with these definitions and a contract of sale is concluded with a statement that the price is subject to these definitions, it would have considerable force in determining what is understood by the parties to the contract in respect to such price quotation.

While specific reference has been made to the "Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions—1941" and to "Incoterms 1953," it is essential to bear in mind, as previously pointed out, that foreign trade definitions have been issued by organizations in various parts of the world and the courts of different countries have interpreted these definitions in different ways. To reduce the opportunities for misunderstanding to a minimum, therefore, it is fundamental that there be agreement between seller and buyer as to what is actually meant when a price quotation is made. A buyer in a foreign country who is familiar with definitions endorsed by an organization in the foreign country and the court decisions interpreting such definitions, on receiving a price quotation from a seller in Canada is constrained to construe it in the light of such definitions unless the quotation is clarified by a stipulation as to what definitions apply in making the price quotation.

In addition to the commonly used terms, there are many others, some of which are found in particular trades only. Where definitions are not formally approved and adopted by trade organizations for general use, it is necessary that a seller and buyer should specify exactly what is understood in respect thereto, indicating the obligations of both parties so that there may be no misunderstanding. In respect to "C.I.F." contracts, it further should be pointed out that the International Law Association adopted certain rules relating thereto in 1928 which, as later modified in 1931, are known as the "Warsaw-Oxford Rules."

An extensive list of technical abbreviations used in foreign trade and exchange transactions is given in Appendix III.

SHIPPING AND MARINE INSURANCE

In the conduct of export trade it is essential that meticulous care be exercised in understanding and complying with the requirements of the buyer and the importing country, as well as Canadian Government regulations where they apply. Mistakes and misunderstandings can be costly, and, because of the distances involved, can give rise to lengthy delays. This is more fully developed in the comments appearing under the caption "Documentation". It is equally important that careful consideration be given to the packing of the goods. Packing must be strong enough to withstand the stresses to which such shipments are exposed in the numerous handlings and stowage in the ship's hold, and thus protect the contents against physical and chemical damage, as well as against pilferage, but at the same time should be designed so as not to unnecessarily increase the cost, including freight cost. The marking of the packages or pieces should be durable in character and should be such as to properly identify and aid in the carriage of the shipment to its destination. Care should also be exercised in the selection of the transportation routing, and in properly describing the goods in the bill of lading to assure that the most favourable ocean rate may be applied.

There are frequent year-round sailings from Canadian Eastern and Western Seaboard ports to most foreign countries. There are also direct sailings from a number of ports on the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes to many overseas ports during the season of St. Lawrence-Great Lakes navigation, roughly from the middle of April to the end of November.

Ocean carriers enjoy immunity from liability for loss or damage caused by perils of the seas and a wide range of risks under the statutes of many maritime countries and the conditions of carriage embodied in the ocean bill of lading. Marine insurance, which is designed to afford protection to those having an interest in the goods, against perils from which the ocean carrier is relieved from liability is, therefore, an indispensable adjunct of ocean commerce. Cargo coverage is a specialized field which can not be described here except in a very cursory manner. There are three main types of cargo coverage available—F.P.A. (Free of Particular Average); W.P.A. (With Particular Average); and "All Risks" (i.e. all physical loss or damage from external causes), together with many variations of these three main forms of coverage which are employed in insuring particular cargoes. It is important for the foreign trader to realize that a marine insurance policy is a valued policy and that the value declared should be of such amount that in the event of a casualty, the assured will be fully reimbursed for the losses sustained. War risks and the inclusion of coverage against losses resulting from strikes, riots and civil commotion are not embraced in a marine policy but may be added thereto by endorsement or issuance of a separate policy. If it is desired to have insurance attached from time the shipment leaves the exporter's factory to the time of its arrival at the premises of the consignee, this may be arranged by the addition of "Marine Extension Clauses" to the policy so as to afford protection from "warehouse to warehouse".

Export shipments may be insured under a specific policy issued for a particular shipment, or an exporter may arrange for a floating policy to cover all his shipments properly declared through a copy of the individual insurance certificate sent to thc Insurance Company. Various other clauses are available to meet the particular requirements of the assured, and it is consequently necessary that the underwriter have full knowledge of the insurance buyer's marketing practices and trading methods in order that a marine policy may be "tailor made" to afford satisfactory protcction. This usually can be arranged whether the insurance buyer's interest is of a direct or contingent nature. The exporter should accordingly consult a reliable marine insurance broker in order to obtain a policy which best suits his particular needs and the requirements of his customer abroad.

DOCUMENTATION

In preparing the documentation for export shipments there are two principal considerations to be borne in mind, accuracy and time. In all aspects of export trade it is essential that care be taken in meticulously meeting the requirements of the buyer and the regulations of the importing country. Errors and irregularities may result in heavy fines or the assessment of excessive rates of duty in the importing country. In addition to the rcquirements of the country of destination the exporter should take care to ensure that the documents provided are in accordance with the terms of the letter of credit, where payment is being made by this means. In many instances documents that are not required by the customs authority of the importing country are specified in the letter of credit and if they are not correctly provided it may be difficult or impossible for the exporter to receive payment. The second consideration is that ample time should be allowed for the preparation of documents prior to the required date of shipment. Often printed forms have to be secured from consulates, completed and resubmitted to the consulate for visé and considerable delays can result should the consul not be available when the documents are submitted or if, for example, they are presented on a national holiday of the consul's country.

There are several documents required for most overseas shipments, each of which is a study in itself:

(a) Ocean Bill of Lading—which may be a

Straight Bill authorizing delivery of the goods to the named consignee, or an Order Bill which requires presentation of a negotiable original in order to claim the shipment (may require legalization by the Consul of the country to which the goods are consigned);

(b) The Commercial Invoice (may require legalization by the Consul of the importing country, and may also require certification as to origin and value of the goods by a competent authority such as the Canadian Manufacturers' Association);

(c) The Insurance Policy or Certificate;

(d) A draft or Bill of Exchange whose tenor reflects the terms of payment agreed between exporter and buyer;

(e) Customs Invoice or Certificate of Origin (Commonwealth countries);

(f) Consular Invoice and/or Certificate of Origin (for non-Commonwealth countries) which is subject to certification by the Consul of the country concerned (many non-Commonwealth countries require, in addition, an endorsation or certificate as to origin and value of the goods, signed by a competent authority such as the Canadian Manufacturers' Association);

(g) Packing list;

(h) Import License and/or Exchange Permit must, in the case of certain countries, be obtained from the importer and presented when applying for consular visa of customs documents. In the case of some countries it is sufficient if the number of the import license is indicated on all documents.

As far as Canadian Government regulations are concerned, the Export Entry Form B-13 is to be furnished, and an Export Permit may be required depending upon the nature of the goods and the country of ultimate destination.

Where imported materials or parts are used in, wrought into, attached to, or consumed in the manufacture of articles in Canada, and such articles are subsequently exported, the Canadian Government allows a drawback of 99% of all duties and taxes paid on such imported materials or parts. The claim form is known as K-32 and, if the importer of the materials or parts is not the manufacturer claiming the drawback, it will be necessary for the latter to secure from the Canadian importer a certificate of importation and sale. There are certain documents that have to be presented with the claim for drawback, such as the export invoice and the export entry form. An extra copy of the latter (Form B-13) should be completed and handed to the transportation company or parcel post authorities along with the other copies, with a note thereon requesting that the Collector of Customs (at the last port from which the goods leave Canada) stamp, sign and return it to the exporter for export drawback purposes.

In all these matters, the exporter who is unfamiliar with the procedure or with the requirements of the market to which he is shipping should consult the Department of Trade and Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and other expert advisers, and he may find it advisable to engage the services of a competent international freight forwarder. The Tariff Department of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association can supply members with summaries of the customs documentation requirements of any country, and time should be allowed to study these requirements well in advance of making a shipment.

FOREIGN LICENSING AGREEMENTS

For a variety of reasons arising from the growing industrialization of overseas markets and the increasing pressure of competition from third countries, a situation may be faced where the continuing export of finished goods becomes unprofitable. In these circumstances, the manufacturer may consider the desirability of starting a manufacturing operation abroad, perhaps through a foreign license agreement. Such an arrangement may produce a number of worthwhile results, such as a tactical advantage in the market concerned and in adjoining markets, the monetary return from the export of "know how", the mutual exchange of technical information with the licensee, and the possibility of a continued or increasing volume of exports of components. The operation of a foreign licensing programme involves a much lower capital commitment than direct investment in manufacturing facilities abroad, but there is correspondingly less control over the operation. Any such undertaking requires a most careful investigation and study, and the difficulties should not be under-estimated.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF EXPORT REFERENCES

An exporter will find the accumulation of a small basic reference library an invaluable aid in the operation of an export department. In addition, a loose-leaf system of references arranged alphabetically by countries will enable the export manager to keep the current information on hand relating to the markets of specific interest to the company, with particular reference to its own products. Under each country the documentation requirements should be set out according to the various general divisions, namely: ocean freight, parcel post, rail, air parcel post, air cargo and express. Under these in turn should be listed the names of the customs documents and the data required for each. If possible, typical forms should be included in the loose-leaf book and, by way of example, information should be typed in under the various columns. Space should be reserved for amendments and from time to time as required the information should be reconsolidated. The date the information is compiled should be noted as well as the date of any amendments and the source of same. In this way the exporter will have a date to check from for documents in future shipments.

The following is a list of basic reference works which can find a useful place in any export department.

I. Surveys of Export Procedures—

(a) "Review of Export and Import Procedures", The Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Contains a general outline of the various documents required in export and import trade for commercial freight and rail shipments. Price $1.00 to non-members.

(b) "The Techniques of Export Trade", Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. Contains a detailed survey of export procedures. Price $1.00.

(c) "Financing Foreign Trade", The Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal. Contains details of import and export finance and the theory and practice of foreign exchange. No charge.

(d) "Foreign Trade Handbook", Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto. Contains conversion tables and other data of similar nature. No charge.

(e) "Dictionary of Foreign Trade", Prentice-Hall, Inc., New York City. Contains the definitions of foreign trade terms, usages, practices, procedures, and abbreviations alphabetically arranged for handy reference.

(f) "Understanding Export", The Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Contains articles on export pricing and export quotations. Price 50 cents.

II. Detailed Information on Customs Documents—

(a) "Exporters' Encyclopaedia" (Annual), Thomas Ashwell & Co., Inc., 20 Vesey Street, New York City. Contains information on shipments for all countries with data on ports and trade centres, reference tables, insurance, export terms and practice, trademarks, customs procedures, weights and packing hints, and freight forwarders. Note that information is given from a United States point of view; other sources should also be consulted, especially in dealing with customs documentation, for certificates of origin and their visés for shipments emanating from Canada including documentation requirements for the Commonwealth. Price $35.00.

(b) "Exporters' Year Book" (Annual), "Syren & Shipping" Ltd., 26-28 Billiter Street, London, England. Arranged alphabetically by countries and contains basic information similar to that in the Exporters' Encyclopaedia but on a much more condensed scale. Price 50 shillings.

(c) Leaflets issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. Contain information on customs documents, com-

GOVERNMENT EXPORT SERVICES

Canadian firms and individuals interested in foreign trade may obtain guidance and assistance from the Department of Trade and Commerce, including its corps of trade commissioners in sixty-one countries around the world. The primary purpose of its officers is to explore new avenues to the markets of all countries, and to maintain the highways of trade in constant repair.

Commodity officers in Ottawa familiarize themselves with the operations of firms all across Canada and the nature of their products. Inquiries from trade commissioners or other sources are channelled to those in a position to meet the demand along with available information concerning the prospective purchaser. They often urge participation in trade fairs or specialized trade shows, where it is felt that the provision of a Canadian display will create a better understanding of products that can be sold in the country concerned on the basis of price, quality, continuity of supply and service.

It is desirable that new firms with an export potential should communicate with the department, and furnish pertinent information relating to their operations and products, thereby enabling the commodity officer to determine its ability to compete in the foreign field. They are also urged to express an interest in trade fairs in which the department plans to participate.

Other officers are engaged in trade and tariff negotiations, in an effort to create the most favourable atmosphere in which commercial transactions may be conducted. Close contacts are maintained with industry, with a view to the utilization of excess manufacturing capacity, the establishment of branch plants and the development of new products. Promotional literature is prepared, primarily for distribution at international trade fairs, and a wide range of information is made available to businessmen interested in foreign trade.

Commercial intelligence, which includes reviews of economic conditions in many lands, trade and tariff regulations, commodity requirements and industrial developments, is made available in "Foreign Trade". This illustrated magazine is published by the department for the information of exporters and importers. A list of Canadian trade commissioners, with their addresses, is published once a month, while lists of commercial representatives of other countries in Canada appear at periodic intervals, together with lists of senior personnel at head office in Ottawa to whom inquiries can be directed.

Most of the articles in this magazine are written by trade commissioners in the field who are familiar with markets in their respective territories and are well known in the principal business communities. Changes in import controls and other regulations are recorded, and trade notes that might suggest profitable business are reproduced at regular intervals.

The itineraries of trade commissioners on tour in Canada are published in "Foreign Trade", in order that exporters and prospective exporters may communicate with them when in the immediate vicinity.

The subscription to "Foreign Trade" is $2.00 a year in Canada and $5.00 abroad. Orders should be placed with the Queen's Printer, Government Printing Bureau, Ottawa.

A section of the department co-ordinates participation in international trade fairs abroad, in order that the fullest advantage may be derived from the promotional effort of the department, in co-operation with Canadian firms for whose products a market can be developed in the countries concerned.

Businessmen requiring guidance in their foreign trade transactions may have occasion to communicate with trade commissioners, commodity officers with specialized knowledge of their particular products, tariff experts or other officers of the department. One or more branches may be required to provide the necessary assistance in solving particular problems, and in securing a market for Canadian products. Inquiries directed to the department or to an individual are funnelled to the branch best qualified to provide the desired service.

TRADE COMMISSIONER SERVICE

The Trade Commissioner Service, with headquarters at Ottawa, has offices under trade commissioners in many overseas countries. A director, aided by an Executive Director and two Assistant Directors, has charge of the work of the Service at home and abroad.

There are 63 trade offices abroad, located in most of the strategic commercial centres of the world. In addition to the trade commissioner, many offices have one or more assistant trade commissioners, depending upon the importance of the post to Canadian trade. In those centres where Canada maintains a diplomatic mission, the trade commissioner is attached to the mission as a commercial diplomatic officer and is given the title of Minister (Commercial), Minister Counsellor (Economic), Commercial Counsellor, or Commercial Secretary, according to his rank.

When attached to a consulate, he carries the title Consul-General, Deputy Consul-General (Commercial), Consul (Commercial), or Vice-Consul (Commercial), according to rank and the consulate, in addition to trade commissioner.

The duties of the trade commissioner are to introduce Canadian exporters and importers to the corresponding businessmen of other countries; to study conditions and needs of the territories where they are located; to obtain and forward inquiries for Canadian goods to headquarters at Ottawa and to Canadian exporters; to report on important requirements in their territories and to make direct inquiries or conduct preliminary surveys regarding the potential market for any product, reporting the exact kinds of goods wanted, competition to be met, methods of packing, shipping or billing, tariffs and trade regulations affecting these goods, etc.

Trade commissioners assist Canadian importers and manufacturers who desire advice on the present and prospective supply of goods and materials available in various countries, best methods of purchase, methods of approach to overseas suppliers, prices, specifications, packing, etc.

Trade developments the world over are reported by trade commissioners to the Department at Ottawa, and this information is available to all Canadian exporters and importers. They also prepare periodic reports on trade, business and financial conditions, markets for particular commodities, materials available for supply for import into Canada, and other related subjects for publication in Foreign Trade or in pamphlet form.

Trade Commissioners' Tours

The periodic return of trade commissioners for official tours of Canada is one of the most important factors in effecting practical co-operation between Canadian firms interested in foreign trade and businessmen in other countries. The trade commissioner can, during the course of his tour, call upon or discuss export and import problems with firms interested in exporting to, or importing from, his territory. The Department brings back the trade commissioners by rotation, subject to the exigencies of trading conditions and of the Service generally. Well in advance of the time of arrival in Canada, individual exporters and importers are circularized for the purpose of arranging appointments. In addition, the department publishes a notice in Foreign Trade inviting firms who may be interested in any particular territory to state whether an interview is desired. The names of such firms, together with those with whom the trade commissioner has been in communication, form the basis of the itinerary. Businessmen wishing to interview any trade commissioner on tour may do so by communicating in advance with the Trade Commissioner Service or with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association or the local Chamber of Commerce.

Assistance Available from Canadian Trade Commissioners

Canadian exporters can obtain assistance and information from branches and divisions of the Department of Trade and Commerce, including officers of the Trade Commissioner Service in the posts abroad. Similar guidance is available to overseas traders interested in the development of closer commercial relations with this country.

In addition to the information which Canadian trade commissioners can provide direct, the Department of Trade and Commerce maintains a number of services in Ottawa which will prove helpful to prospective exporters. Preliminary inquiries should be submitted to the Commodities Branch or the Agriculture and Fisheries Branch, when relating to specific products, and to the appropriate geographical division of the International Trade Relations Branch, when dealing with specific foreign markets or sources of supply, and to the International Trade Relations Branch when dealing with tariffs, trade restrictions, licensing, etc. Other departmental arms which can render special services are the Industrial Development Branch, Transportation and Trade Services Division, Export and Import Permit Division, and the Trade Publicity Branch.

Canadian exporters should request a listing in the Exporter's Directory, which is maintained by the Commodities Branch and supplied to Canadian trade commissioners throughout the world.

A list of Canadian trade commissioners and their respective territories is published periodically in Foreign Trade and Commerce extérieur, issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. The specific information obtainable from Canadian trade commissioners is listed below for the convenience of exporters.

The duties of the trade commissioners bring them into daily contact with the Government, with importers, exporters, and the general business community of those countries to which they are accredited. They know the requirements, the business methods and the problems of the foreign market place. This practical knowledge is available for exporters to draw on.

The following topics suggest some of the ways in which the trade commissioner can help promote the sale of Canadian goods abroad.

Assessing a New Foreign Market:

If a Canadian firm is considering a foreign market for the first time, the trade commissioner can supply information on the following:

Market Requirements:

(a) whether a particular commodity, or one similar to it, is in use in the area;

(b) used by whom, and for what purpose;

(c) whether the country's requirements are met by local production, by imports, or by both;

(d) if a commodity is not in use, the probable reason why not, the possibilities of developing a market for it, and how this might be done.

Import Trade:

(a) size of the import market;

(b) sources of imports;

(c) the pattern of imports, and prospects for the future;

(d) how the import trade is managed — by wholesalers, commission agents, etc.

Tariff and Trade Regulations:

(a) customs classifications;

(b) rates of duty;

(c) comparability of tariff treatment Canada receives with that of competing countries;

(d) nature of import and exchange controls.

Competition in the Market:

(a) who the competitors are;

(b) the range of their products;

(c) how long competing products have been established in the market;

(d) the status of local representatives of foreign firms, and any special assistance they receive from their principals;

(e) prevailing prices and suppliers' terms of credit.

General:

(a) how to quote in the market;

(b) available banking, shipping, storage, and brokerage facilities;

(c) prevailing economic conditions and their bearing on marketing possibilities;

(d) business conditions as they affect a principal industry if such industry represents a prime consumer in the area.

Establishing a New Exporter in the Market:

If the Canadian exporter decides that prospects are encouraging, the trade commissioner can assist the firm in establishing itself in a new market in the following ways:

(a) by selecting several firms suitable as agents, introducing the Canadian firm's commodity lines to them, and determining their interest in taking on the representation;

(b) by placing the Canadian supplier in direct contact with those firms that express an interest in further discussions on the matter of representation;

(c) by supplying credit and other information on the local firms to assist the Canadian company in deciding which of these would be the most appropriate contact. Normally, the trade commissioner will include his own recommendation at this time.

(d) If the trade commissioner considers it advisable, he will encourage a representative of the Canadian firm to visit the market and, in order to make such a visit as profitable as possible, is prepared to:

— arrange necessary appointments,

— make reservations for accommodation,

— receive and care for the visitor's mail and other messages,
— help out with any interpreting that is required, or if this is not possible from his own office, recommend suitable alternative arrangements.
— recommend legal counsel or any other technical type of assistance required for negotiation purposes,
— be available for any explanation or additional information required.

Continuing Assistance:

Once a Canadian firm is established and goods are moving into the market the trade commissioner can continue to be of assistance in the following ways:

(a) by maintaining close contact with and encouraging the new agent;
(b) by interceding on behalf of the exporters with local authorities if problems arise as a result of exchange, import, or other trade controls;
(c) by making recommendations leading to the settlement of trade disputes;
(d) although the trade commissioner cannot be considered in any sense of the word as a debt collector, he is always prepared to give guidance in respect to the recovery of overdue accounts;
and, finally,
(e) by using his knowledge and the contacts he has developed to cut red tape, smooth out difficulties and help keep Canadian trade moving.

Co-operation by the Exporter:

The Canadian exporter can co-operate with the trade commissioner in many ways. When making inquiries concerning a potential market

DO:

(a) Provide a short history of the company, particularly if new to the market or to the trade commissioner.
(b) Specifically mention whether the firm is a manufacturer, export agent, jobber, etc.
(c) Indicate if the company is presently exporting, and if so to what markets.
(d) Give details of the methods of distribution normally used in other markets.
(e) Advise if the firm has ever sold to the market under study, if there were previous agents in the territory, if these connections still exist, and what their relationship would be with the fresh contacts sought.
(f) Furnish catalogues supplemented by sufficient information to provide the following minimum of detail on the product:
— description and physical characteristics,
— trade name,
— qualities, grades and sizes the product comes in,
— minimum quantities shipped for export,
— export packaging,
— production and delivery schedule,
— any specific features or selling points,
— terms of payment normally required,
— prices, C.I.F., principal port of entry in the foreign market, or as otherwise recommended by the trade commissioner.
(g) Follow up market research by personal attention and visits to the area.

There are two "Don'ts" to add in connection with the latter point. When a personal visit to the market is planned

DON'T:

(1) Forget to tell the trade commissioner well in advance that you are coming, the objective of your visit, and what you would like him to do before you arrive.
(2) Cut your visit so short that it loses its practical advantages.

COMMODITIES BRANCH

The principal role of the Commodities Branch is to maintain liaison with Canadian manufacturers and the export community. The purpose of this is to enable the branch to advise regarding business opportunities abroad, and to supply information to trade commissioners concerning interests of Canadian exporters. These functions are carried out by commodity officers, specialists in commodity trade, who are arranged in various divisions that represent the major industry groups. These are: Appliances and Commercial Machinery Division, Chemicals Division, Engineering and Equipment Division, Forest Products Division, Metals and Minerals Division, Textiles and Consumer Goods Division, and the Transportation and Trade Services Division.

In addition, the branch is responsible for the administration of the Export and Import Permit Act, and for the continuous attention that must be given to Canada's participation in international arrangements for the control of strategic materials.

In the field of trade promotion, it is the duty of officers of the branch to ensure that trading opportunities brought to light by the Department's widespread activities are made known to Canadian business, and that exporters are aware of the services the Department has to offer. Commodity officers are called upon for a variety of specialized trade promotion efforts. These extend from plant visits and interviews, preparation of trade studies and market surveys, to making arrangements for the display of goods abroad and the introduction of Canadian products into new markets.

The trade promotion work of the branch begins at the point of finding Canadian products on which to concentrate promotional efforts. Great emphasis is placed on the discovery of products which might be exported or exported in greater volume. When such products are discovered, detailed reports are sent to trade commissioners throughout the world to encourage market research and promotion.

The sale of certain products in export markets is facilitated through their display in fairs and exhibitions abroad. This particularly applies to fully manufactured goods. The Commodities Branch, working in co-operation with the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission, is at times able to arrange for a trial presentation of Canadian products in overseas trade fairs and in the United States market. Assistance and information are also available to Canadian exporters who wish to display goods in American trade shows.

The Transportation and Trade Services Division reviews developments in shipping, air, rail and highway transportation, as these concern foreign trade, and makes this information available to exporters and importers. The division analyses trends and short term fluctuations in charter market and liner service freight rates. Assistance is provided to shippers faced with problems of high transportation costs. Information on the services and facilities available to exporters and importers is maintained, together with data on port and other charges, and on restrictive measures affecting cargo movements. Information on freight rates is also supplied to Canadian business firms. The division is concerned with telecommunication services to overseas countries, as this relates to Canadian trade. Information on Canadian firms for use by trade commissioners in handling inquiries is obtained.

AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES BRANCH

The Agriculture and Fisheries Branch consists of three divisions, the Grain Division, the Food and Agriculture Division and the Fisheries Division. It is concerned with the promotion of trade in agricultural and fisheries products. This includes the planning and co-ordination of promotional activities, as well as programming, analysing and disseminating information on foreign agriculture and fisheries.

The Grain Division is responsible for liaison between the Canadian Wheat Board and the Department of Trade and Commerce, while the Food and Agriculture and Fisheries Divisions maintain close contact with the Departments of Agriculture and Fisheries, respectively, on matters pertaining to production and availability of supplies. All three divisions are in constant touch with the trade in relation to trade promotion.

The branch works closely with the Canadian Trade Commissioner Service, which includes a number of officers with training in agriculture and fisheries, situated in countries which are either important markets for Canadian agricultural or fisheries products, or with which Canada competes for world markets. These officers supply information dealing with various aspects of agriculture or fisheries in those countries. This material, which is augmented by similar information from other members of the trade commissioner service, is reviewed and analysed by the branch and made available to appropriate government departments and boards, as well as associations and others who may be interested.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE RELATIONS BRANCH

The International Trade Relations Branch has major responsibilities in the development and conduct of Canada's trade and commercial relations with other countries. In addition to participation in trade and tariff negotiations, the Branch provides immediate and direct service to Canadian exporters through initiating consultation with other governments on particular trade problems and through supplying detailed and up-to-date information on foreign tariffs, import and exchange controls and other foreign regulations and restrictions affecting export sales of their products.

The International Trade Relations Branch includes a General Relations Division and five area divisions, as follows: United States; Commonwealth; European; Asia and Middle East; Latin America. The Area Chief is responsible for co-ordinating the work of trade commissioners in his area. He is also responsible for general information and inquiries regarding trade in his respective area and should, whenever possible, be consulted by Canadian businessmen before travelling abroad.

The branch follows closely commercial and economic developments at home and abroad to enable views to be formulated in the interests of Canadian trade. In respect of trade and tariff negotiations detailed preparatory work is carried out through trade analysis and in consultation with trading interests with a view to expanding export opportunities for Canadian products. This preparatory work is followed through by the Branch in the direct process of negotiation with other countries. Close attention is paid to the conduct of Canada's trade with particular reference to Canada's rights and obligations under international agreements and arrangements. When Canadian trading interests are adversely affected or threatened by actions of other countries appropriate remedial action is initiated by the Branch. Such action includes efforts to find practical solutions to particular tariff problems, to obtain the relaxation of quantitative restrictions and, in general, to work for the removal of barriers to Canadian exports to other countries.

To assist Canadian firms in their export trade, the Branch maintains complete and up-to-date information on Customs regulations and tariffs, import and exchange controls, documentation requirements, sanitary marking and labelling regulations, and other regulations and requirements of other countries directly affecting trade. Details of these regulations are supplied on request. New measures in this field are publicized through the Department's official publication Foreign Trade and by other means.

TRADE PUBLICITY BRANCH

The function of the Trade Publicity Branch is, in co-operation with other branches of the Department, to stimulate the sale of Canadian commodities in other lands. It is responsible for the preparation of trade promotional literature for distribution at international trade fairs and, through trade commissioners, to businessmen in their respective territories. Other literature is made available for use by the press in other lands. Advertising in foreign trade publications, in support of promotional campaigns for groups of commodities and Canada's participation in trade fairs, is also the responsibility of this branch.

It acquaints Canadian businessmen in particular, and the public in general, with the many services obtainable from the Department, at home and abroad. It also aims to stimulate in Canada a greater appreciation of the importance of export trade, and to cultivate an informed approach to foreign trade transactions. Foreign businessmen are urged to consider Canada as a possible source of supply for goods required by them, and as a market for their own commodities.

The principal media through which information is made available to Canadian businessmen are press releases issued by the Department, and "Foreign Trade", in which reports from trade commissioners on market and economic conditions in their respective territories, articles by commodity officers and other personnel of the department, and a wealth of commercial intelligence are published. A French-language counterpart, "Commerce extérieur", is also produced in the Trade Publicity Branch.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BRANCH

The Industrial Development Branch provides a variety of information and services on request to Canadian and foreign companies contemplating new manufacturing facilities in this country or planning to expand existing manufacturing operations. Because so many firms have requested information on government regulations, taxation, customs duties, labour conditions and regulations, a booklet has been prepared on these and other subjects.

Growing out of the need for adequate information prior to investing in new plants or undertaking the manufacture of new lines of products, the Industrial Development Branch has developed a close co-operation and exchange of information with trade associations, other federal government departments, Canadian banks, provincial governments and other industrial development agencies. Most of the work carried out by the branch is undertaken on a confidential basis, as requested by the principals seeking assistance.

Among the services provided by the Branch to industry and the other agencies are:

(a) Special studies of products imported into Canada.

(b) A products bulletin outlining proposals from abroad for manufacture under license in Canada.

(c) Facilities reports and lists of manufacturers equipped to produce under sub-contract or as licensees.

(d) A bulletin outlining manufacturing or investment opportunities for Canadians in foreign countries.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT EXHIBITION COMMISSION

The Canadian Government Exhibition Commission is responsible for the planning, organization and administration of all Canadian exhibits in fairs and exhibitions abroad, in which the Canadian Government participates. In addition, the Commission advises private exhibitors and their agents on the best means of displaying Canadian products at overseas fairs. It is also responsible for international fairs and exhibitions held in Canada, financed and sponsored by the Federal Government.

EXPORT CREDITS INSURANCE CORPORATION

This Crown Corporation was established by Act of Parliament in 1944. Administered by a Board of Directors, including the Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce and the Deputy Minister of Finance, the Corporation insures exporters against non-payment by foreign buyers due to some of the major risks of loss involved in foreign trade. The Head Office of the Corporation is in Ottawa and branch offices are maintained in Montreal and Toronto. It is represented in Vancouver by an official of the Department of Trade and Commerce. An Advisory Council, consisting of members from all parts of Canada representing the services of banking, manufacturing industries, and the primary industries of farming, fishing, lumbering and mining, meets from time to time with the Directors and Officers to discuss the Corporation's operations and to advise on policy matters.

The insurance is available under three main classifications:

(a) General Commodities sold on short credit terms which are usual for the particular trade concerned;

(b) Capital Goods sold on medium credit terms which often extend over a few years;

(c) Services.

The General Commodities Policies are issued to cover an exporter's entire sales for a period of a year, with renewal privileges, whereas Capital Goods Policies are issued on an individual basis to cover each specific contract of sale. Services Policies are also issued on an individual basis.

The risks insured by Export Credits Insurance Policies include: insolvency or protracted default on the part of the buyer; exchange restrictions in the buyer's country preventing the transfer of funds to Canada; cancellation of an import licence or the imposition of restrictions on the import of goods not previously subject to restriction; the occurrence of war between the buyer's country and Canada; or of war, revolution, etc., in the buyer's country; and additional transport or insurance charges occasioned by interruption or diversion of voyage outside Canada or the continental United States of America.

Premium rates for this insurance protection are nominal and have averaged less than 1% on all business done by the Corporation to date. Policies are issued on a co-insurance basis and the Corporation insures exporters up to 85% of the selling price.

Under the Export Credits Insurance Act, Sect. 21, the Corporation may be authorized to enter into certain contracts of insurance, where the Board of Directors of the Corporation is of opinion that a proposed contract of insurance would impose upon the Corporation a liability for a term or in an amount in excess of that which the Corporation would normally undertake, and in the opinion of the Minister of Trade and Commerce it is in the national interest that the proposed contract be entered into. Under Sect. 21A of the Act, the Corporation may be authorized by the Government to provide financing in respect of an export transaction. Such financing is available only in cases where extended credit terms in excess of 5 years are involved.

BUREAU OF STATISTICS

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics issues detailed monthly, quarterly and annual reports on Canada's foreign trade. These are extremely useful to exporters and those interested in developing export markets, and to manufacturers and others interested in information on imports. Other statistical publications also provide useful data on other aspects of the Canadian market.

The monthly reports on the Trade of Canada give information on trade by commodities, showing for each commodity listed the total quantity and value of the trade and the quantity and value of trade with individual countries. Quarterly reports record trade by countries, showing for each foreign country the quantity and value of trade for every commodity separately listed. A final annual report in three volumes provides complete statistical detail, with comparative figures for two previous years, analyses of the statistics, and information on tariff revenues. Preliminary bulletins supply advance summaries of trade information each month.

The Bureau also issues reviews of Canada's trade, which summarize and interpret the detailed statistics and direct attention to the more important changes they reveal. From these figures the businessman can see what Canadian goods are going to foreign markets and to some extent assess the possibilities for export of his own products.

Statistics on the Canadian balance of international payments are released in quarterly and annual reports. These can also be useful to the Canadian manufacturer in studying the international background affecting trade.

All these trade publications — together with numerous others dealing statistically with manufacturing and a wide range of Canadian economic and social activities, many of which provide useful information in planning marketing and production programs for particular industries — are available at nominal rates from the Bureau of Statistics and from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa. Information as to titles, contents and prices of its reports and bulletins is contained in the latest edition (1960) of the Bureau's catalogue, entitled "Current Publications", copies of which may be obtained free on request.

EXTERNAL AID OFFICE

The External Aid Office was established in November 1960 as a separate agency of the Canadian Government incorporating the functions related to Canadian external aid programs formerly performed by the Economic and Technical Assistance Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, the Economic II Division of the Department of External Affairs and certain officers of the Department of Finance.

The Director General of the External Aid Office is responsible to the Secretary of State for External Affairs for the operation of the following Canadian aid programs:

The Colombo Plan
The Canada-West Indies Aid Program
The Special Commonwealth African Aid Program
The Commonwealth Technical Assistance Program

Under these programs Canada provides grants of Canadian foodstuffs, equipment, material and services to help the underdeveloped countries achieve satisfactory economic progress. Through the technical assistance side of the programs, Canadian experts are sent abroad to advise and teach, and trainees from the less-developed countries are brought to Canada for study in a variety of fields.

The External Aid Office also administers the Commonwealth Scholarship Scheme in Canada, in conjunction with the Canadian Universities Foundation.

In addition, the Office cooperates with the United Nations and other international agencies which operate aid programs.

EXPORT SERVICES OF THE CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION

Practical Assistance to Exporters

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, with its specialized Service Departments and its Division and Branch offices across Canada, is in a particularly strong position to assist its members in developing export trade.

More than 2,000 firms in the membership of the Association are interested in export, while many hundreds of the Association's members are substantial importers of materials and equipment. The Association also assists members with their import problems.

Service Departments

Established over 90 years ago, the Association's growth has paralleled that of manufacturing industry and export trade in Canada and it has built up service departments with a background of experience and information extending over many years. Indeed, export trade is specifically mentioned as a prime object of the Association in its constitution, which provides that "The objects of this Association shall be to promote Canadian industries and to further the interests of Canadian manufacturers and exporters, and to render such services and assistance to the members of the Association and to manufacturers and exporters generally, as the Association may deem advisable from time to time."

There are many complications connected with doing export business. Questions, concerning the transportation of goods overseas, the tariffs and other trading restrictions of importing countries, marine insurance, trade practices, trade statistics, credit information, translations, invoicing requirements and a multitude of other incidentals constantly arise.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, particularly through its Commercial Intelligence, Tariff and Transportation Departments, can be of great help in dealing with these problems. Having experienced management and the cumulative knowledge of many years' studies, these departments are able to render a comprehensive service to members, covering all phases of export business.

Export Trade Committee

The C.M.A. Export Trade Committee acts as a joint sub-committee of the Commercial Intelligence and Tariff Committees, coordinating policy matters over the whole range of Association studies, services and activities in the field of export. Its scope is exclusively in matters affecting the export trade of Canada's manufacturing industries, including reference to the impact of imports. It has responsibility for the Association's export studies which were previously carried on under the auspices of the above-mentioned committees and makes recommendations as to the Association's policy and action in matters arising from time to time affecting the export trade of member companies.

Facilities for Assisting Exporters

The Association provides an extensive range of direct and indirect services, enters many activities, provides information on a large number of topics and makes specialized studies of a variety of matters of interest to exporters. Some examples of these services, activities and topics are as follows:

- Abbreviations used in foreign trade
- Agency agreements abroad
- Appointments with Trade Commissioners, overseas buyers, etc.
- Cables, coding and decoding
- Certificates of Origin
- Commercial laws of foreign countries
- Commonwealth content and other preference conditions
- Consular regulations

 - Parcel post
 - Rail and ocean freight
- Restrictions, trade and exchange
- Shipping services
- Statistics on trade of Canada and foreign countries
- Tariffs, Commonwealth and foreign
- Taxation abroad
- Trade agreements
- Trade fairs and exhibitions
- Trade terms and definitions
- Translations of foreign correspondence

Canadian Trade Index

The Association performs a particularly valuable service in the interests of Canadian export trade by compiling and publishing annually "The Canadian Trade Index," a volume of over 1100 pages, containing a detailed list of Canadian manufacturers with a carefully classified list of their products, together with much other useful information for industry and for firms engaged in export and import business. With the co-operation of the Department of Trade and Commerce, copies of "The Canadian Trade Index" are distributed to hundreds of importers in overseas countries through the offices of the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner Service.

Industrial Canada

"Industrial Canada," as the official monthly publication of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, is issued for the same purpose as the Association was formed — to promote Canadian industries and to further the interests of Canadian manufacturers and exporters. As well as containing a great deal of information concerning the development of Canadian industry and articles of interest to manufacturers generally, news is published each month on a variety of matters affecting foreign trade in Canada and in other countries with which Canadian exporters do business. Such foreign developments as changes in exchange and customs regulations, export controls, import licensing requirements, customs tariffs, foreign exhibitions, transportation news, etc., all help to keep Canadian exporters up-to-date on trade matters. Regular monthly features of special interest to exporters are to be found under the headings

"Tariff Review", "Trade Developments", "Transportation Digest", "Where in the World", etc. In addition, from time to time, there are general articles on some important features of special interest to exporters.

Meetings and Conferences

The Association holds frequent meetings, both large and small, bringing together members interested in export trade to discuss mutual problems, to hear addresses by experts and generally to promote the interests of Canadian exporters. Visitors from overseas are often received and provided with assistance in arranging appointments with suppliers in Canada. At the Annual General Meeting, conferences on export and international trade attract large audiences. The Export Study Clubs, operating under the auspices of the Commercial Intelligence Committee, present a programme of export education and provide a forum and informal atmosphere in which members can profitably discuss their problems and exchange up-to-date information on economic conditions and trading practices throughout the world. The Export Study Club of Ontario, operating from Toronto, attracts large audiences from throughout the Province and a similar function is performed by the Export Study Club of Montreal.

During the past season the Export Study Clubs have dealt with a variety of topics including: opportunities in Australia; banking; packaging for export; foreign competition in the Latin American Market; a report on the European Economic Community; trading in the Far East; and a report on the Export Trade Promotion Conference. The Export Study Club of Ontario featured a series of meetings dealing with export techniques, for the benefit of companies new to exporting, covering the following topics: how to approach a new market; how to insure your exports; how to get help with documentation; organizing export transportation; sea and air export shipments; and export pricing.

In addition, the Export Study Clubs have organized special projects for the examination of export market possibilities and the transportation facilities through which foreign shipments are handled. Included have been visits, by substantial groups of exporters, to Detroit and New York for meetings with customs officials and trade and marketing organizations, as well as tours of water, rail and air transportation installations in Montreal and Toronto. Periodically, the Clubs undertake a combined visit to Ottawa for a day of meetings with senior officers of the Department of Trade and Commerce to discuss export markets, trade relations and methods of export trade promotion.

Policy on Export Trade

The Association stands for and advocates the greatest possible trade between nations and believes that steadfast support should be given to existing international organizations and institutions in their efforts to solve the problems of world trade and finance. It recognizes that the well-being of the Canadian people depends to a great extent on the volume of Canada's export trade, which provides the means of purchasing necessary imports.

The Association believes that the extent of Canada's export trade depends to a great degree upon the ingenuity and hard work of many thousands of Canadian firms and individuals engaged in the export of foodstuffs, raw materials, manufactured goods and services. Exporters must have all possible knowledge of the trade practices and requirements covering export shipments and it is for this reason that the Association has paid so much attention to its specialized departmental services which have continuously expanded to keep abreast of the times.

In the increasingly complex modern world, however, government policy plays a growing part. Canadian Governments have always displayed a keen interest in the problems of exporters, and, wherever and whenever necessary, the Association has placed the views of exporters before the Government. Canadian manufacturers and exporters are particularly fortunate in being served by a Trade Commissioner Service which is second to none in the world, and the Association has had particularly cordial relationships with these officers who, on their Canadian tours, have made C.M.A. offices their headquarters for over fifty years.

The Association maintains close liaison with federal and provincial government departments concerned with Canada's external trade. It also co-operates with manufacturers' and businessmen's organizations in other countries in the interests of facilitating international commerce and takes an active part in the work of such international bodies as the International Chamber of Commerce and the Inter-American Council of Commerce and Production.

Explanation of List

☆ THE LIST beginning on the following page comprises the names and addresses, alphabetically arranged, of all firms appearing in the classified section of the Canadian Trade Index. In this list we have tried to give the users of the book some information that will be useful in getting into quick touch with the makers of any desired article.

No street addresses are given in Part 3 (the classified article section). These are recorded where necessary to complete the address in Part 2 (the alphabetical list).

We have not attempted to give, in this list, any full account of the products. These will all be found under separate headings in the classified section on page 521 and following. Where the firm or company name does not indicate clearly the line of goods manufactured, some of the main articles produced, or the nature of the firm's business, are mentioned.

The address given is that of the main place of business in Canada, usually the head office, although it may be both factory and office address. The addresses given later, under "Factories," "Mills," or "Plants" are generally those of branch factories. Branch offices also are given.

For. Rep. or simply Rep. means foreign or other representative for export sales purposes.

The cable addresses and codes will be found useful in initiating and transacting export business.

Information regarding new firms received too late for complete listing in this section will be found under "Additions" on page 518. Similarly late changes are recorded under "Changes" on page 517.
